Pope Francis' Pandemic Outreach, Financial Questions and the McCarrick Report

THE YEAR IN REVIEW

With Pope Francis grounded at home in Rome, the year 2020 revealed the best of the papacy and the worst of the Vatican, with a glimmer of hope for the future.

Holding aloft the monstrance to an empty square, with millions watching at home, Pope Francis' blessing on the city of Rome and the world amid the COVID-19 pandemic showed the power of the Petrine ministry in its truest form.

"Let us invite Jesus into the boats of our lives," St. Peter's successor said.

"Let us hand over our fears to him so that he can conquer them. Like the disciples, we will experience that, with him on board, there will be no shipwreck."

Throughout the year, Pope Francis attempted to conduct teaching and evangelization that felt nearly shipwrecked on shoals of scandal.

On Feb. 12, Pope Francis released Querida Amazonia, which outlines his "four great dreams" for the ecological, social, cultural and ecclesial future in the Amazon region.

While Pope Francis did not move on drastic proposals in the Amazon synod, he has moved ahead with his vision of a liturgical Amazonian Rite based on the Zaire Rite developed for Congolese Catholics.

The year also saw key turning points in Vatican-related financial and sexual-abuse scandals. After an onsite inspection from Moneyval, the Council of Europe's anti-money-laundering watchdog, Pope Francis finally undertook substantial financial reforms to bring the Vatican in line with international financial standards.

Pope Francis also dismissed longtime aide and confidant Cardinal Giovanni Angelo Becciu — one of the key players identified as internally resisting reform efforts — over allegations of financial malfeasance.

The Vatican also continued to feel the tension between the demands of the prophetic nature of the papacy and the realpolitik of foreign relations.

The Vatican forged ahead with renewing a secret deal with the People's Republic of China on the appointment of bishops, which Vatican Secretary of State Cardinal Pietro Parolin said has so far been a success.

Cardinal Joseph Zen, the outspoken emeritus bishop of Hong Kong, however, publicly and repeatedly accused Cardinal Parolin of deceiving Pope Francis over the China deal.

As a teaching high point, Pope Francis published the encyclical Fratelli Tutti, which served as an extended meditation of 43,000 words on the need for human solidarity.

"Jesus' parable [of the Good Shepherd] summons us to rediscover our vocation as citizens of our respective nations and of the entire world, builders of a new social bond," wrote the Pope.

As 2020 came to a close, the Vatican published the McCarrick Report, a watershed document that gave some insights into Cardinal Theodore McCarrick's rise to power, despite accusations of sexual misconduct against him.

The McCarrick Report has prompted Catholics in other countries, such as Chile, to demand the Vatican produce their own "McCarrick Reports" on their own country's clergy sexual-abuse scandals and cover-ups.

Finally, at the conclusion of a chaotic 2020, Pope Francis entrusted 2021 to the care of St. Joseph, the patron of the universal Church.

"St. Joseph reminds us that those who appear hidden or in the shadows," he said, "can play an incomparable role in the history of salvation."
